Consent for Telehealth Services

This document provides information about telehealth services offered by Jack Hambrick, MFT, through Hambrick Psychotherapy LLC. Please read carefully and sign below to indicate your informed consent to receive services via telehealth.

What Is Telehealth?

Telehealth involves the delivery of mental health services using interactive video conferencing technology. Sessions conducted via telehealth are similar in structure and content to in-person sessions. You will be able to see and hear your therapist in real time, and your therapist will be able to see and hear you.

Platform

Hambrick Psychotherapy LLC uses Doxy.me, a HIPAA-compliant video conferencing platform designed specifically for healthcare providers. No account or software download is required. You will receive a link prior to your session that you can access through any modern web browser on a computer, tablet, or smartphone.

Technical Requirements

To participate in telehealth sessions, you will need: a device with a camera and microphone (computer, tablet, or smartphone); a reliable internet connection (broadband recommended); a private, quiet location where you will not be interrupted; and an up-to-date web browser (Chrome, Firefox, Safari, or Edge).

Privacy and Confidentiality

The same confidentiality protections described in your Informed Consent for Psychotherapy apply to telehealth sessions. Doxy.me uses end-to-end encryption to protect your privacy. However, you are responsible for ensuring your own privacy on your end — including using a private location, using headphones if needed, and securing your device. Your therapist will also be in a private, confidential setting.

Sessions may not be recorded by either party without prior written consent from both the client and the therapist.

Risks and Limitations of Telehealth

Telehealth has potential risks and limitations that differ from in-person sessions, including:

- Technology failures (internet outages, audio/video disruptions) may interrupt a session.
- It may be more difficult for your therapist to observe non-verbal cues.
- Telehealth may not be appropriate for all clinical presentations or crisis situations.
- Information transmitted over the internet, despite encryption, carries some inherent risk.

Technology Failure Protocol

If a session is interrupted due to technology failure, your therapist will attempt to reconnect via Doxy.me. If reconnection is not possible within 10 minutes, your therapist will contact you by phone to complete the session or reschedule. Please ensure your therapist has a current phone number on file.

Emergency Procedures

If you are experiencing a mental health emergency during a telehealth session, your therapist will take steps to ensure your safety, which may include contacting emergency services. Because your therapist may not be physically present with you, it is important that you provide your current location at the start of each session and have a local emergency contact available. If at any time you are in immediate danger, call 911 or go to your nearest emergency room.

Location and Licensure

Jack Hambrick is licensed as a Marriage and Family Therapist in the State of Ohio (M.2300265). Telehealth services are only available to clients who are physically located within the State of Ohio at the time of the session. You are responsible for ensuring you are in Ohio during sessions. If you will be traveling outside Ohio, please notify your therapist in advance.

Fees and Cancellation

All fees and cancellation policies described in your Informed Consent and Financial Policy apply equally to telehealth sessions. Telehealth sessions are billed at the same rate as in-person sessions.
